Tribute from David C Jones

Relation: Friend

When I was growing up in Osoyoos, Albin was my hero. He was the best basketball shooter I ever knew, with the softest hands on a ball I ever saw. When I became a teacher in Revelstoke, I spent countless hours by myself in the gym after school and on weekends. I shot thousands and thousands of basketball shots, and every time I made one, I thought I was Albin.

Albin was always friendly to me. Even though I was two or three years younger than him, he invited me to a group that went down to Oroville to play touch-football.

My mom and dad deeply respected Albin. Once when mom was very worried about our sick dog, she phoned Albin at the Pioneer Meat Market. Albin, a master of dogs, dropped everything and was at our place in three minutes.

Albin was a remarkable ping pong player and a superb softball catcher. He could hit softballs a mile, and some of his moonshots were caught by opposing fielders in the next orchard. Pissed off, he built a regulation fence well before that orchard to clarify what a home run was.

The last time I saw Albin, he was running a car wash in town, and I met him with my younger son Kyle, then perhaps nine or ten, on the street. With absolute delight, I said to Kyle, "Please meet my greatest Osoyoos hero, the one I have mentioned many times—Albin Hochsteiner!" Albin smiled that big smile of his. And I couldn't have been happier.
