The Vineyard's Song

Amidst the rows of green and gold,

Where sun-kissed leaves unfold,

There lies a tale of love untold,

Whispered by the grapevines' hold.

His hands, weathered and strong,

Tended each vine, righting every wrong.

Through frost-kissed mornings and sunlit days,

He wove his dreams in the tendrils' maze.

The soil cradled his hopes and fears,
As roots delved deep, year after year.
And when the first clusters blushed with pride,
His heart swelled—a vintner's joy, worldwide.

The seasons danced—their rhythm true,
Pruning, budding, harvest's due.
He walked the rows, a silent vow,
His love for the land etched on each bough.

And when the cold winds swept the hill,
He wrapped the vines, a guardian still.
Their survival, his unwritten creed,
In every leaf, his spirit freed.

Now, as the sun dips low and shadows blend,
The vineyard hums—a hymn without end.
His legacy, a vintage of devotion,
In every grape, a heartfelt emotion.

So let the grapevines bear witness to his love, and may their clusters be a sweet reminder of the seasons shared.
